Full job description

Philanthropy Manager Location. Melbourne, Australia Salary. Competitive salary and benefits Closing Date. Tuesday 12th October Are you interested in helping to support the next big step in medical device development to transform the way we treat disease? The Bionics Institute is an internationally recognised, independent medical research institute that solves medical challenges with technology. They lead the world in the research and development of innovative medical devices and therapies that improve human health. The Institutes multidisciplinary teams of world class scientists, engineers and clinicians have an impressive track record of translating concepts into clinical reality, transforming the lives of people across a range of conditions, currently including hearing impairment, vision loss, Crohns disease, Parkinsons disease, epilepsy, stroke, arthritis and diabetes. The Bionics Institute has an ambitious new agenda for philanthropic fundraising in support of their ground-breaking work: the Bionics Institute now seeks a new Philanthropy Manager who will play a key role in deepening donor engagement and building all sources of fundraising revenue for the Bionics Institutes future growth and sustainability. With a high level of intellectual curiosity and a passion for new technologies, you have the ability to inspire scientists and researchers, helping them articulate their stories in a compelling way. Your fundraising experience, particularly in major or high-level regular giving, will be matched by a data-driven, donor-centric approach. For further information please contact Deann Stevens, Business Support Administrator, Australia Office, Richmond Associates on +61 2 8218 2185 or at info@richmond-associates.com.
